President's Message

Hello NFCT Family,

It's September, which means a season of transitions; summer to fall, back to school, and for the NFCT, that means our new season is beginning! What a season we have planned! I commend last year's Playreading Committee, as we have a nice variety: laughs, drama, tension, reverence, and heroism. I am personally looking forward to seeing each of these plays, which led me to think about all that goes into the process of a production. The adage "many hands make light work" comes to mind, and that's what I love to see happen in our corner of the North Fork theatre scene. I've had many of you come up to me and offer to help in your own ways, which has been so refreshing. I thank you all and hope it continues. Now that our committees/projects have been settled, as you'll see later in this newsletter, my hope is that you'll see something that piques your interest or you see something that you can tackle and you reach out. Even if it's carving out a few minutes of your day to say "I've got your back!" or "Where do you need me?," we're sure to start this season off on the right foot. Thank you – every single one of you - for making this community shine on and off stage. Enjoy the beginnings of fall and September's glow.

Truly & artfully,
Becky Adams-Korn

Summer Wrapped with Laughs and a Splash!

We hope you made it down to see "13: The Musical" and/or "Finding Nemo Jr.". First up was "13: The Musical" and not only was the talent of the cast incredibly impressive, but many audience members got to experience the joy of full body laughter; this show had many of us in stiches! The cast and crew should be so proud, as they pulled off one entertaining weekend at the NFCT. We can't wait to see what these kids do next!

One weekend later and "Finding Nemo Jr." graced our stage. The performers and technical designs from a CM Performing Arts Center tour were sponsored by The Butterfly Effect Project to bring children's theatre to the NFCT. The two-show day was designed so local families and those who have never experienced live theatre could have a fun day of live art. Families from the Butterflies, the Southold Mother's Club, and NFCT friends and neighbors heard about the event and came to see Nemo and his fishy friends cross the ocean. Talk about communities coming together! The show was adorable, the kids got to experience theatre at a pace appropriate for them, and four groups came together to do something for our communities' children. All around a great project, thank you everyone who helped! We made a lot of kiddos happy!

Now Accepting Playreading Submissions

Do you have a show you're just itching to direct? Maybe there is a show you would love to see the NFCT produce? Now is your chance, submissions to the Playreading committee are now open until Dec. 8th at 11:59pm. Members can submit up to three plays to vp@nfct.com and all ideas are welcome. Traditionally, two musicals, two plays, and a youth onstage production are chosen by our Playreading Committee. These choices will be for the 2027/2028 season. Learn more at https://nfct.com/submit-a-play-for-consideration/ and send your play choices today!
